UK Outlook for Sunday 5 Sep 2021 to Tuesday 14 Sep 2021:
With a region of low pressure residing close to UK at the start of next week, there will most likely be unsettled conditions for many areas, although confidence is low regarding the nature of this regime. Showers or longer spells of rain are likely, but some drier and brighter interludes are still expected. Rather windy at times, breeziest in the northwest. Further out, some places could see heavy rain at times, particularly in western and northwestern areas, although showers, and potentially thunderstorms, may also affect other areas in a more localised fashion. Still, some more settled interludes are expected, most likely in the southeast. Temperatures are likely to fluctuate around average through this interval, but a brief spell of warm conditions giving way to a cooler period remains possible.
